Wedding Bells

Miss Jennie Melissa Whitbeck the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Whitbeck, became the bride of John Clarence Barber, second son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Barber, all of Irma, in a quiet ceremony on Monday afternoon May 29 in the United Church, Wainwright.

Rev. Dobson performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a pale blue rayon jersey frock with a navy off-the-face model hat and navy accessories. Her jewelry was a rope of pearls, gift of the groom. A corsage of deep red and white carnations completed her ensemble.

Attending her was her niece, Miss Catherine Whitbeck, who wore a dress of royal blue crepe, with sequin trim, a natural toned straw hat and accessories. Her corsage was pink carnations.

Best man was Mr. Donald McKay.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Whitbeck chose a navy sheer dress with accessories to tone and red roses on corsage. Mrs. Barber, mother of the groom was in a pale rose dress with black accessories. Her corsage was cream roses.

After the ceremony a buffet supper was served to about thirty five guests at the bride's home. The three-tiered cake, beautifully decorated by Mrs. Riley was flanked with bouquets of snapdragons, tulips and fern.

The happy couple left by motor for a short honeymoon at Calgary and Banff. On their return they will reside in the Irma district.

BANG'S DISEASE

Bang's Disease (Bovine Brucellosis) in cattle is fast becoming a major menace to cattle owners in Alberta and the western Provinces. Because of the danger of the disease spreading to man, the health authorities have thrown their weight into the fight against this dread disease.

Bang's Disease has only one major symptom in cattle. The major symptom of Bang's Disease in cattle is the loss of a calf by abortion from 4 to 8 months in the gestation period. The animal seldom becomes sick or dies and after loss of one calf usually produces normal healthy calves. However, these cows can spread the disease to unaffected animals, so that once Bang's disease is in a herd it will spread to all the animals in the herd.

Today we have method of combating the disease. Heifer calves can be vaccinated against it and a resistance built up in herds to cut down losses that run into millions of dollars annually.

Take, for example, a cow loses one calf. Sale price at weaning time this last year ran from $30.00 to $100.00. Thus, for an investment of 75c for vaccinating a total of from $30.00 up depending to what age the calf was kept could have been realized. This is only one way of looking at the situation. In the local paper in the last year there have been many requests in the want ads for cows that have been T.B. and Bangs tested. In the milk shed area around Edmonton, dairy men are paying $15 to $20 more for cows that have been vaccinated. The demand for vaccinates is high and farmers with good stock are capitalizing on this demand at the present time.

Bang's disease follows no par-

Education In Australia

INTERESTING REPORTS have come from Australia recently regarding the progress of education in that country. A young nation like Canada, it has likewise been populated by many people who went there hoping for greater opportunities for themselves and for their children. Out of this desire for equal advantages for everyone, they have built up a fine educational system which places emphasis on the use of the natural resources of the country and the development of native culture. In addition to its primary and secondary school systems, Australia has a national university, established by the federal government. Now, through the establishment of a number of substantial scholarships students are being encouraged to undertake higher studies, in order to provide the country with greater numbers of highly trained minds.

Awards Begin In January

Mr. G. N. Menzies, the Prime Minister of Australia announced a short time ago that, commencing next January, 3,000 university scholarships will be made available each year and will be distributed among the states on the basis of population. The value of these scholarships will depend upon the individual circumstances of the students, and the largest ones to be awarded will amount to approximately $600. Some scholarships will be available to other students and special grants will be given to those who are married. Three years from now it is expected that some 9,000 students will be receiving benefits from this plan and the annual cost to the government will be about $7,000,000. If Canada were to inaugurate a similar scheme it is estimated that the proportionate figures would be 9,000 students, and the cost $12,500,000.

Project Is Of Interest Here

In view of the extensive plan which was undertaken in Canada to provide assistance for veterans attending universities, the project in Australia is of interest here. In the academic year 1947-48 over 30,000 veteran students were receiving assistance under the Veterans Rehabilitation Act. The success of the students who attended universities under the provisions of this act has given rise to speculation as to the advisability of making a permanent plan to provide financial assistance for able students wishing to continue their studies. Australia has apparently seen the need for greater numbers of citizens with professional training and is endeavouring to meet this need, and many Canadians will be interested in the progress of this plan to encourage university education there.

ODDS FAVOR QUINTS REACHING 50th BIRTHDAY

NEW YORK—Chances are two in three that the Dionne quintuplets will live to celebrate their 50th birthday together, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. statisticians reported.

The five famous girls were 16 on May 28. The calculators figured the quintuplets have 97 in 100 chances of living to be 21 and 27 in 100 chances of reaching 65 together.

The statisticians said the estimates were conservative. They pointed out the figures were based on the average survivorship for girls in the general Canadian population and added that since the Dionne girls have special care their prospects for beating the average are "excellent".

No Moose Hunting In Alberta, 1950

Mysterious Migration Reason For Protection

EDMONTON.—There will be no moose hunting in Alberta this year. E. S. Huestis, provincial game commissioner, announced.

Mysterious migration of the large animals to southern foothills in the province where there is less protection against hunters is given as the reason for the ban. In other years the moose have inhabited the north bush country. The cause of the migration which has occurred in Alberta and British Columbia this year has not been solved by biologists and naturalists, according to game officials.

Mr. Huestis also stated that according to the order-in-council passed recently caribou hunting also will be banned this year. Poor wintering has caused a decrease in the herds, and it has been decided to give the animals sufficient time to increase.

The bag limits this year for other animals are one male mountain sheep; one male or female mountain goat; one either male deer or male elk; one grizzly bear and one black, brown or cinnamon bear.

Either one male or female elk can be taken in the Pincher Creek area, south of the Castle and Old Man Rivers and west of highway No. 2 between Macleod and Cowley.

NEW RECORD IN CAR SALES SEEN

EDMONTON.—New car sales in Canada last year will hit a record mark of well over 800,000, S. S. Rafuse of Bridgewater, N.S., president of the Canadian Automobile Dealers' Association of Canada, said at the annual meeting of the northern Alberta branch.

are: Sept. 15 to Oct. 31 for sheep and goats; Nov. 1 to Dec. 15 for deer and elk, and Sept. 15 to Dec. 15 for bears.

Mr. Huestis also said that hunters applying to the department for special permits will be allowed to shoot deer or elk during the open seasons on sheep and goats in the Athabasca, Brazeau and Clearwater forest reserves. There is no change in the fees for hunting permits.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

The Wager :: People Should Be More Careful.

By Charlotte McCarthy

"YOU'RE pretty sure of the guy, aren't you, Anne?" The speaker, a tall, blonde girl whose complete absence of expression took away all the charm of her flawless skin and perfect features, neatly snuffed out a cigarette.

"I am very sure of Joe," Anne wished Kay wouldn't talk like this. These last few months since she had agreed, against her better judgment, to let the girl share her apartment, there had been so many hints dropped, which, while they hadn't shaken her faith in Joe, had made her vaguely unhappy.

"If I had a fellow in another city, particularly one with wandering eyes like Joe, I'd be prepared for the worst." With an expressive shrug of her shoulders, she touched the brief flame of her lighter to a fresh cigarette.

"I wouldn't say that Joe was the type to flirt, and you should know that, if you remember what happened the night I introduced you to him." There was a double meaning in Anne's remark that the other wasn't slow to sense.

"Oh, I try my luck with every man I meet. Flinders keepers. You didn't expect him to show any interest in me, no matter how he felt, did you, with you in the picture? I thought you said he never missed a week writing to you. This is Saturday, and I haven't heard of you getting a letter."

"There'll be one. The postman hasn't called yet." Why did Kay try so hard to undermine her faith in Joe?

"Just for fun, Anne, I've got a five dollar bill that says there won't be a letter." Kay flipped the money from her purse and threw it on the table. Anne caught her full lower lip between even white teeth. Joe might miss writing, even though there hadn't been a week since he'd gone away that she hadn't heard from him at least once. Five dollars meant nothing to Kay, whose father sent her a generous check each month. Anne thought of her next-to-last pair of nylon stockings in the bathroom, of the appointment with the dentist next week, and then, ashamed of her hesitation, she opened her bag, and drawing out the lone bill, smoothed it out on the table. "No letter from Joe today and this is yours, my friend," she said airily, with more confidence than she felt.

"If you had to work as hard as I do, you wouldn't worry too much about it."

"Oh, work," Kay dismissed the subject as if she found it extremely distasteful. "Wait! There's the postman."

With maddening deliberation, the wiry little man in blue made his way down the street, and came up the walk to their building. It seemed an age before they heard him finish his work in the lower hall and the door swinging smartly closed behind him.

"I'll get it," Her heart pounding, Anne hurried down the stairs.

Her hand shook, as she fished the tiny key in the lock. A brilliantly colored circular, a postcard from a girl who was spending a week in Bermuda, a letter for Kay. And that was all.

Slowly, her face flaming, she walked back upstairs, and handed the letter to Kay.

"Who was Anne?"

Anne averted her glance from the barely concealed triumph in the other's eyes. "It's all yours. But it is the first time that Joe..."

"This here got put into my box by mistake. People should be more careful!" The door opened abruptly, and a plump white hand holding a thick envelope appeared.

With a suspicious moisture in her eyes, Anne took the letter.

"Count your money again, Kay," she said softly. "You're ten dollars short."

PEGGY

To Save Millions

Plan Rail Tunnels To Protect Tracks

VANCOUVER.—A plan to save the railways millions of dollars in British Columbia during years of floods and heavy snows is under consideration.

The Fraser canyon is the trouble spot for Canadian National railways, the tracks winding along the turbulent Fraser river. On the opposite side is the mainline of Canadian Pacific railway.

For years, the bad-weather season has meant isolation of coastal districts from the prairies because of snow or flood-swept lines. Last winter was the worst of the century.

President Donald Gordon of the C.N.R., despite his few months in office, has studied the situation. He summed it up:

"The trouble is the whole darned mountain comes down on top of us every high water."

He said millions of dollars have been spent for maintenance, but he wants to see a system where "we do not have to pay out the money year after year."

The job would cost from $150,000 to $175,000,000 and would take from 20 to 25 years to complete. It would mean the reconstruction of 42 miles of mainline through the toughest part of the canyon.

Mr. Gordon, here on an inspection trip, hastens to say it will not be started this year or next. But it is of high importance for the future.

The plan, it is understood, calls

Milk Production Shows Increase In Alberta

EDMONTON.—Milk production in central and northern sections of Alberta continued to show substantial increases for the month of April, resulting in provincial increases of 11.7 per cent. in creamery butter and 9.7 in cheddar cheese manufactured, said the monthly report of the dairy branch.

For the first week of May butter-fat receipts at creameries were below those for same week of 1949, and feed conditions may be a factor, as well as the recent five-cent reduction in the floor price of butter, added the report.

April butter production in Alberta was 2,288,000 pounds, an increase of 250,000 over the 2,040,000 pounds made during April of last year. Cheese production for the month was 228,000 pounds, an increase of 20,000. Butter stored at Edmonton on May 1 was 2,315,000 pounds.

Freight traffic is a factor, the engineers say, in any plans for the future. The project will depend on how profitable freight traffic is in years to come.

Alberta's natural gas resources have been much in the limelight during the past six months, discussed in the house of commons in the press, and by experts for corporations that seek to pipe it out of the province to adjoining provinces and western States. According to statisticians Alberta has oodles of surplus gas. Wells are being brought into production in widely scattered areas. Chances are that if natural gas is allowed to be exported a more intensive search will be made for further supplies and many new gas fields opened up. Alberta exports wheat, oats, cattle, lumber, coal, etc., without much thought of a shortage for local consumption. Should the same argument hold good for the export of natural gas?
